competition intelligence antitrust & mergers

The EU's competition policy seeks to establish and maintain an efficient market that enhances consumer welfare. It combines the application of sector-specific rules, such as those for telecoms operators with significant market power or the Digital Markets Act that addresses gatekeeper online platforms, with the enforcement of horizontally applicable competition law.

Cullen International's Antitrust & Mergers service tracks and explains the enforcement of competition law in Europe, covering all key developments across the digital economy, media, postal and telecoms sectors.

At Cullen International, we have a unique ability to explain these developments in their regulatory and technological context, giving our clients in Europe and beyond a complete view of the competition policy that may impact or inspire their decisions.
